THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

1. Building construction in the city since 1945 includes a slaughter house in the southern part of town, a bread factory on Boteva Street, three large nurseries where employed women can leave their children, and a lycee for girls. A huge five-story apartment building is under construction. It will have ten apartments on each floor.
2. The population of Burgas number 60,000 according to the 1949 census. In order to encourage an increase in population, the municipality opens a credit of 60,000 levas to a newly married couple. Of this sum, 10,000 levas are exempted upon the birth of the first child. If a second child is born, a further 20,000 levas are exempted. After the birth of the third child, the remaining 30,000 levas are exempted. This means that the couple is exempted from paying the entire credit if it has three children.
3. The Soviet Geological Group occupies a building which was formerly the Marinkini Hotel, opposite the Mosque. Four Russians are members of this group which is headed by Kostadin Dimitrov who lived in Russia for more than thirty years. Their assignment is said to be the exploitation of mines at the local called Kara-Bair, 10 kilometers west of Burgas. The product of the mines is immediately shipped to Russia on the ship, KARL MARX. Workers in these mines enjoy special privileges, they are paid 1,000-1,200 levas daily, and receive additional rations. Only those laborers recommended by the Party and the State Security are accepted in these mines.
4. In the vicinity of the Burgas harbor and near the Lycee of Commerce lies Inter-Continental, which is a Russian commercial firm engaged in import-export between Bulgaria and Russia. It has a personnel complement of 10 to 12 persons, headed by a Russian, Simonov.
5. Factories in Burgas include the Stalin Thread Factory and the Veriga Metal Goods Factory.
6. The City People's Council is located in the government building on Alexandrovska Street. It is headed by Nedelcho Radev, a former lawyer, and his assistant is Ivan Kavachev. The director of the Reconstruction Section is Georgi Kotochev who is an engineer. The director of the Economics and Food Section is Georgi Jelevev Nedelchev. The director of Labor and Social Works is Dragomir Osmanliyev. Director of the Agricultural Section is Mihail
